THE PILGRIM AND THE KNIGHT.

In a noble castle, there once resided a very rich knight. He expended much money in adorning and beautifying his dwelling, but he gave very little to the poor. A weary pilgrim came to the castle and asked him for a night's lodging. The knight haughtily refused him, and said:

"This castle is not an inn."

The pilgrim replied: "Permit me to ask two questions, and then I will depart."

"Upon this condition, speak," replied the knight; "I will readily answer you."

The pilgrim then said to him: "Who dwelt in this place before you?"

"My father," replied the knight.

"And who will dwell here after you?" said the pilgrim.

The knight said: "With God's will, my son."

"Well," said the pilgrim, "I each dwell but a time in the castle, and in time must depart; and make way for another, what are you here otherwise than guests? The castle, then, is truly an inn. Why, then spend so much money adorning a dwelling which you will occupy so short a time? Be charitable, for that hath pity upon the poor endeth to the poor, and that which he hath given he will pay him again."

The knight took these words to heart. He gave the pilgrim shelter for the night, and was ever afterward more charitable unto the poor.

THE LITTLE GROCER WHO FAILED.

"Mamma," cried Freddy, "I will play grocery store."

After a great deal of counting, Freddy found he had seven pennies.

"Not much capital," said sister Nellie—she was grown up.

"What is capital?" asked Freddy.

"The money you have to buy your goods with, that is your capital."

Freddy bought tea, coffee, white sugar, beans, salt, pepper, flour, meal, candy, nuts, soap, dried apples, crackers, and starch. But all these cost fifteen cents, and Freddy had only seven cents.

Freddy arranged his store and put out his sign: and just then all the other brothers and sisters came home from school, so that Freddy had plenty of customers, and his goods went off very fast, and he thought grocery store was a splendid play. Lucy said she would take the dried apples if he would write it down in his book for her, because she had forgotten her money.

When the little grocer had sold all his goods, Nellie reminded him that he owed eight cents. Freddy began to look around his store for money, but he found only four cents.

"Why, they didn't pay for the things," said Freddy.

"You know I asked you to put the dried apples down in your book," said Lucy.

"Yes," said Freddy, "but I didn't have a book, and I forgot it besides; but you might bring back the dried apples, Lucy."

"Oh, no! I can't! I've eaten them," said Lucy.

Then Freddy found that the candy and nuts were eaten up too, and those who had bought them had no money to pay for them.

"Well," said Freddy, "it's no use. I can't pay that eight cents, for I've only four cents."

"Why, then, our little grocer has failed," said Nellie.

"Failed!" said Freddy. "What means I can't pay it?"

"Yes, that's it," said Nellie.

"That is because I did not think about the pay when I sold them," said Freddy.

When you are a grown-up man, and have a real store, remember these things. Don't buy more than you can pay for. Don't sell to other people more than they can pay for. Always think what you are doing.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE GRAND DUKE ALEXIS.

A diplomatic secret has got out in regard to the official treatment of the Grand Duke Alexis when in the United States. The story is told to us as follows: When Governor Curtin, on his return to this country, went, in his capacity as Minister to Russia, to take formal leave of the Emperor, the latter closed the conversation suddenly in these words: "I wish, sir, that you would on your return, express my hearty thanks to the American people for the reception they have given my son, the Grand Duke Alexis." This, it will be remembered, was shortly after Gen. Grant had refused to return Alexis' call, and the latter had left Washington in disgust. Governor Curtin noticed the Emperor's failure to send thanks to the Government as well as the people. He supposed, however, that this was a slip of the tongue until the Empress Dowager in a most precisely the same words, "said to me, sir," said he, "to carry your Majesty's thanks to my Government and the people." "I sent my thanks, sir," the Empress replied, "to the people—and only to the people." Governor Curtin afterwards complained of the slight that had thus been put upon the Government he represented. He was invited by Gorschakoff to a conference on the subject. Three books were brought in from the archives of the Foreign Office. The first contained an autograph letter from Napoleon III., asking Russia to join with England and France in breaking up the Federal Republic, and guaranteeing the independence of the Confederacy. The letter asserted that England had promised her co-operation, which was probably true. The second contained the Emperor's reply. He flatly declined the proposed alliance proposed by Napoleon, and declared that, in the event of any European interference in the war, Russia would actively aid the North. The third book contained copies of the sealed orders given to the Russian Admiral, who, as our readers will remember, brought his fleet into New York harbor during the war. The orders directed him to proceed at once with his whole available force to New York City, to remain at anchorage there for some time; and, in the event of European interference with the blockade, to put himself and his whole force at the command of the Cabinet at Washington, and promise abundant aid and speedy reinforcements. While Governor Curtin stared, dumbfounded at these unexpected proofs of Russia's fidelity to the Union cause, Gorschakoff said to him: "Perhaps you can appreciate now, sir, why the Emperor and Empress send their thanks to the people who have honored the Grand Duke Alexis and not to the Government that has insulted him. We saved your country, and now your President has insulted our representative. It is too much."—New York Express.

HERE AND THERE.

Nearly every county in Oregon contains undeveloped coal mines.

A New York firm has received an order for a $15,000 brick out fit. Hard times.

Forty-seven thousand Germans have gone back to Paris to live.

The post-master at Holiday, [illegible], has a salary of $1 per annum. It is not stated whether he draws it quarterly or annually.

A medallion of John Wesley is to be placed in Westminster Abbey, and under it a representation in bas relief of Wesley preaching on his father's grave.

One-sixth of America's population of about 40,000,000, it is said, cannot read or write; [illegible] 13,000,000, receive instruction.

It is a singular fact, though not generally known, that the back of one's head in perfect health is warmer to the touch than the forehead. In sickness, vice versa.

The Canada thistle has got such a foothold in Missouri that the legislature is called upon to take immediate measures for its extermination. Five years ago it was comparatively unknown in the State.

Somebody has been looking over the records, and finds that the present city of Troy, N. Y., has borne four names in less than a century—Terry Hock, Vensselaerwick, Van Vechtenden, and Troy.

With the exception of a shower in the early part of August, Nantucket has had no rain since the latter days of June, and farmers on the island are driven to the necessity of feeding out hay to their stock.

The theory of a subterranean river, connected with the waters of Lake Superior and Lake Ontario, is revived. It is regarded as absolutely necessary to account for the presence of salmon and herring in the lakes above Niagara Falls.

The Albert Memorial Chapel, at Windsor, which the Princes and Princesses of the Royal Family of Great Britain intend as a memorial of the late Prince Consort, is now, with the exception of a few minor details, complete. It is described as unexceptionally beautiful.

Within the last sixty years it is computed that 25,000 Jews have been converted to Christianity. Missionaries are now welcomed in every house in Jerusalem. Sixty Jewesses meet there daily to hear the gospel.

A boy near Gainsville, Ga., threw a pail full of water over his mother, who had been struck by lightning, and she immediately recovered; it is supposed that the water acted as a conductor, drawing the superfluous electricity from the woman's body.

At a place known as Gold Run, on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, nearly all the inhabitants have for some time been using the so-called wild coffee, and pronounce it very much the same in flavor as Costa Rica, and are substituting it for the imported article.

Hon. J. C. Cadwell, in an address to the old settlers of Wapello County, Iowa, said: "When the town of Ottumwa was settled, the Indian name of the place was Ottumwanock. When we gave it a name, some one think it was my father—moved to knock the 'nock' off, and the 'nock' was knocked off."

Trafalgar Square is about to be beautified by the Duke of Northumberland, who intends to spend some of the purchase money of Northumberland House in making a garden of it. A belt of evergreens will surround the fountains, and the cisternstone flags will give place to neat gravel walks and parterres of flowers.

There are more interesting discoveries. The Cleveland Leader's correspondent in Persia has found some pieces of bricks which bear the monogram of Nebuchadnezzar. Thus we see in the days of Nebuchadnezzar, etc., the mills ground out better paper exceedingly slow, the gentlemen of the period having to carry on their correspondence with brickbats.

Few of the fair sex, who, in obedience to the decree of fashion, have loaded their dresses, cloaks, and bonnets down with white and black jet ornaments, are aware that by so doing they are restoring prosperity to the working classes of Venice who, prior to the revival of the taste for jet trimmings, were in a state of great distress.

A pair of large Sevres vases, the wedding present of Marshal and Madame MacMahon to the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, will be sent in a few days to Clarence House. These vases present an epitome of the Louis XV. portrait gallery of Versailles, being decorated with exquisite miniatures of the celebrated men and women whose likenesses are preserved there.

Slem, the "Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," whose bravery on the battle-field has been the theme of many a song and story, is now known as Lieut. John A. Slem, of the Regular United States Army. He was only twelve years of age when he became famous, but his admirers did not lose sight of him, and in due time he received his present commission from the President.

The Jacksonville Sentinel says: "If any man had said twenty years ago that grapes would be sold all over these Illinois prairies and woods for four cents a pound, he would have been set down as insane, or an enthusiast. Then it was supposed they could only be grown in green-houses. Now they are the hardiest fruit that grows."

The granite soldier who is to surmount the national monument at the battle-field of Antietam, has been completed, and is the largest figure in sculpture out of Egypt. He weighs over thirty tons, and is twenty-one and a-half feet high. The guns he holds is eighteen feet long, and his shoes three feet in length. The face is clean shaven, except a heavy mustache, and is that of a resolute man.

The Pittsburg Commercial earns that a government official is traversing the country making inspection of the cancelled checks of the various banks, in order to ascertain whether they are uniformly complying with the law requiring a two-cent stamp to be placed upon every draft and check paid. The same paper says he is reaping quite a harvest for the Treasury in fines, and the bankers in that vicinity are conducting themselves with remarkable circumspection in this particular.

In the government of Penzan, in Russia, a letter was circulated, which reported that the government intended to send 5,000 of the prettiest girls of the country to Africa to be married to negroes. There was a panic, and the girls made haste to marry any one who would have them, and there were an number of marriages. One brandy dealer made a small fortune out of it, for at Russian weddings they must have brandy. Now the authorities have discovered that this merchant started the story, and they are not yet done with him.

FUN.

"Write me while I am away," said Jones to Mrs. Jones after an affectionate good-by. "Treacherous man!" meditated the lady. "Not one letter does he get. He wants to see them to one of those Western papers."

The Marte is said to be constantly [illegible]. Such, however, is genius. Exchange. Being hard to constitute genius, we have some idea of remarkable brilliancy.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Mosquitoes are described in a certain part of Minnesota as "thicker than the surrounding foliage, with wings like Apollyon's, a beak like an artesian auger, and a voice like the sound of many waters."

An inquisitive chap stepped into a barber-shop the other day, where Smith was about completing the sculpture of a lamb. "Do you cut out that animal?" asked the interrogation point. "O, no," said Smith, "the lamb has been there all the time; I only took the marble from around him—that's all."

"Are the Joneses back?" inquired Mrs. Spiggins, who hasn't been out of town all Summer. "Yes'm," replied the cook, "and Mrs. Brown and the children got home from Saratoga this morning." "Then, Mary, you may open the front shutters," continued Mrs. Spiggins, "and say that we've returned too."

A gentleman whose nationality will become apparent in the sequel, and whose profession was the driving of vehicles, being desirous of conciliating a passenger and excusing the stubbornness of his quadruped, remarked: "He has quare ways, yer anner. What wud ye think av a baste that wud go the likes av this? Wan day he swallered a sovereign, an' av we cud get him to give up was sivin an'-six, a through continuitness."

There was a man in Murray County, Wisconsin, who got mad when he found that the grasshoppers had eaten for his wheat. So he got a big roller and crushed wheat and grasshoppers into the ground. It killed the insects, and a succession of showers revived the wheat, so that it was as good as new.—This is true in a newspaper, and yet we are a little skeptical. No Colorado grasshopper would have submitted to being run over in that way, not while there was room to hop.

It not long ago since several ladies were thrown into hysterics owing to a revelation made to them by another gentleman traveling in the same carriage, as to the history of an air-cushion which he carried on his arm with the utmost anxiety lest anyone should touch it. "That air-cushion," he said to his fellow passengers, "contains the last breath of my dear wife. She expired in it immediately after blowing it out. Beg, ladies, that you will not meddle with it."

The other day, as a Detroit man was riding on the Pontiac Road, he came across an old lady seated in a buggy which had been taken within a few yards of the Grand Trunk Railroad track. She seemed to be uneasy about something, and as he drove up she asked: "Say, mister, hain't that engine going to come along pretty soon?" He asked her to explain, and she pointed to the sign, which read: "Look out for the engine!" and added: "I've waited more'n two hours for the dee engine to go by; but I'm getting tired, and if it don't come pretty soon I'll drive right over the track and go home."

The following conversation took place at an eastern post office: "Pat, I say, Mr. Postmaster, is there a letter for me?" "Who are you, my good sir?" "I'm meself, Pat—that's who I am." "Well, what is your name?" "And what do ye want with the name? isn't it on the letter?" "I want to know the letter, if there is one." "Well, for Christ's sake, then, if ye must have it, 'tis Pat Byrne." "Is there no way to get in there but through this pane of glass?" "No, sir." "Then it's well for ye there isn't. I'd teach ye better manners than to insist on a gentleman's name. But ye don't get it, at ther a so—I'm even with ye; sorra a bit is me name Byrne!"

TEMPERANCE AND THE CHURCH.

Every church that claims to be a blessing to the community and the world ought by every consideration of piety and morality to take high ground on the subject of temperance. This holy war are against the monster vice of intemperance must be waged chiefly by the church of God. Others from various considerations may fall into the ranks, but the church must be in the van. He, who in this day, utters any doubtful word on the temperance question is a traitor to the cause, even more than he who advocates licensing saloons and those traps set by the devil for ensnaring youth, the beer gardens. This is the time when the mass must be stripped from the hideous face of that greatest foe of humanity, intemperance. Children of God, speak out! Touch not, taste not, handle not, the accursed stuff. The curse of God rests on him who putteth the bottle to his neighbor's mouth, or the young lady who putteth the wine glass to her lover's lips.—Baptist Church Paper.

THE QUIET CORNER.

It costs us much to live an earnest and manly life, but it costs a great deal more not to do so.

"The streams of religion run deeper or shallower," says Cadell, "as the sluices of the Sabbath are kept up or neglected." A preacher in Tennessee called the Sabbath "God's cycle, shutting out an ocean of evils."

A lady under great affliction, which she did not bear in a very angelic way, once said to a friend, "Oh, my dear! what should I have done in all this without religion?" "I am sure I can not tell," was the answer, "but you could not have done much worse than that you have with religion."

All rays come from the sun, and yet are not the sun, even so our love and purity, though they are not God, but mere pale weak image and reflection of Him, yet from Him alone they come. If there is mercy in our hearts, it comes from the Fountain of Mercy. If there is the light of love in us, it comes from the Sun of Love.—Chas. Kingsley.

When the late Admiral Foote was in Siam, he invited the royal dignitaries to a dinner on his vessel. As they sat down to the meal, the Admiral, as was his custom, asked a blessing. The king, in surprise, said that he thought that only missionaries did that. "True," was the brave hero's reply, "but every Christian is a missionary."

The Christian becomes weak and languid unless nourished, stimulated by daily portions of the life-giving Word. Continued abstinence from the spiritual manna will [illegible]. The cleansing sword soon [illegible] before the adversary. Capricious fasting, though followed by feasting, will destroy the health of the soul, even as that of the body. The sacred scriptures [illegible] to-day be unread, the step will falter, and grow cold. No month's excess [illegible] such a start for the [illegible] to-day."

Official Paper of El Paso County.

OCTOBER 10, 1874.

THE LOCAL PAPER.—You owe it to yourselves morally, literally to its support, and exactly from it as able, high-toned a character as you would do from any educator in your midst. It is in no sense benefaction, notice and care—for it is your representative. Indeed, in its character, it is the summation of the importance, interest and welfare of you all—it is the aggregate of your own consequence, and you cannot ignore it without miserably depreciating yourselves.—New York Times.

The School Board, having failed thus far to negotiate, at par, the Bonds voted for the erection of the School House, advertised for bids for the completion of the work, payment therefor to be made in the Bonds. The bids were so high that the funds at their disposal would be inadequate, and they have been compelled, in consequence, to let the matter remain in statu quo.

It is possible that they may be able, before long, to negotiate the bonds at par, in which case they can proceed with the work and push it to a conclusion; but, in the present state of the Money Market, it is scarcely probable.

It is exceedingly desirable that the work should not be longer delayed. It is true that the school interests are not at a stand-still because the Building is; on the contrary, they have been carefully watched over and fostered, and we have now a corps of teachers and an organization of the various departments of a Graded School, which it would be difficult to improve upon. But these don't show, and a stranger coming into Town, and seeing the deserted foundations of our School House, and learning that they have been so deserted for about a twelvemonth, is likely to form but a poor idea of our educational advantages and of the importance which we attach to our school interests. And it is to be borne in mind that, in many cases, this will be one of the first things which a visitor, contemplating settling here, will take into consideration.

The amount of bonds issued be insufficient for the erection of the building—and it would seem that, in the present state of financial matters it is,—then the wisest course will be at once to increase the amount to what is requisite, and get the work done. We hope this important matter will have immediate attention.

The subject of extensive systems of irrigation, aided and encouraged by Government grants of land, is engaging modest ly the Denver News, in common with other newspapers. It News seems to have a somewhat more correct appreciation of the cost of conveying water to large bodies of land than is formerly the case, and no longer puts forward the idea that the outlay of one acre of land would be sufficient to induce capitalists to carry water to two acres. This is something gained for, so long as fools's estimates were put forward, it was not easy that anything would be accomplished, but if an accurate idea of the cost of the work can be arrived at, there may be a chance of devising some means to meet that cost. From $5 to $10 an acre, we believe, is the lowest estimate which should be made for conveying the water to the land. In India, it has been found that, with canals of very large capacity, and where labor is cheap, it has cost more than three times the latter amount.

Even that is not a small cost, in comparison with the benefit gained; for the farmer, who farms by irrigation, has his harvest ensured, year after year, and a much larger harvest than is reaped by the farmer who trusts to the rains of heaven. Granting that it will be costly work to bring the thousands of our thirsty acres under water, it will yet pay to do so, and the subject is one which deserves immediate and earnest attention.

But the idea of providing cheap irrigation for those coming into the Territory must be laid aside. It may as well be recognized, and made known, that irrigation and cannot be cheap. Then men will soon arrive at another idea—that small farms must be the rule, and that every acre must be made to yield to the very utmost extent of its ability. If land here is to cost three times as much as it does elsewhere, then the living must be made of a third the amount of land. This, in our opinion, will be found to be the true policy.

Whilst on this subject of Irrigation, we would ask, When is something to be done about the increase of our own Water-Supply? Colorado Springs and the surrounding country promises to grow much more rapidly than was anticipated at the outset, and a much larger supply of water will be needed than was at first anticipated. It is high time that either the Colorado Springs Company or the citizens themselves took some steps in this matter; for it is necessary in such matters to look ahead.

A NEW ENGLAND SUPPER.

A goodly crowd did come together to-night in the Church, and on the Popular Monthly Banquet, on Thursday night, to satisfy the hungry appetites with the substantials of the Presbyterian Church and spread. And many of them did bring hungry appetites, insomuch that some others, coming in after, had to depart again to their homes well nigh hungry, there being but little left for them.

There were many and good things served for the appetites, whose dishes and dishes waited upon the hungry guests with great attention. There was pork and beans, likewise mussed and milk, and cows' milk and brown bread, and many other delicacies. And odd and young did feel marvelous.

And while these did feel, some young men did play upon strange instruments of music, one of which was most marvelous to look upon, for it had many small peices of ivory, which when touched by the young man did utter different sounds. The name of this strange and cunning invention is the Organ, and it has been owned which owe an unseen fire within.

And one did take a large curtain which did hide a portion therefrom the people, and many of the younger folk did take a few of the old folk and do dance hungry, the curtain to do things whereof have were ashamed. During the Supper, there did come a strange and there as they launched the launches of the musical of the young men. And a time, the curtain was lifted for a chance, and the people did see somewhat of what was being done, and they were much shocked and greyved. And one time, they did see Deacon Duncan being drunk near unto a beer-barrel. And another time they did see Master McIntyre with a strange woman about in a wheelbarrow. They also saw Master Donaldson repairing some of his garments, which, in truth, did show credit upon him, but it was mighty strange in this dogging before the table. They were one scene witnessed by the people which did show unto white and new and strange doctrines of present days are leading. The young women were doing a manner of things which men ought to do, to wit: hacking of bottles and chopping of wood, and other such work, while the young men were mashing of butter and nursing of children and sweeping of rooms and many other things unseemly.

Verily, the women they saw these things, rose from their seats and were some muddled sorrowing to find what the preaching of women's rights had brought in route. Don't the ministers of the Church will reproove the young men and women, and instruct them better.

THEY SAY

That Mr. Mills has had offers for marriage from fourteen young ladies, since he appeared in sheet dresses and skirts at the supper the other evening.

That Jesse Fry has bargained with Perry Downing for a couple of stray dogs which get into the Pound.

That Banker Goodrich will have to move to Manitou if he marries a certain young lady in whose dreams he has inspired—etc., etc.

That "Dick's" hat is growing.

That it would take twenty-three more churches to accommodate all the different "denominations" we have in Colorado Springs.

That money is tight.

That some of our lawyers will be asking in their sleep before long.

THE CHURCHES.

There will be preaching in the Presbyterian Church to-morrow, morning and evening, by the pastor.

Service will be conducted in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church to-morrow morning by Professor Edwards.

Addresses were delivered by the chairman, the Rev. Mr. Tait, and the Rev. Mr. McCandless, District Superintendent of the Society. A collection was then taken up, amounting to $32.25.

The following officers were appointed for the ensuing year:—President, E. S. Leonard; Vice President, Rev. Mr. Tait; Secretary, J. W. Gilbey; Treasurer, Jas. Duncan; Directors, G. H. Stewart, N. Hodgman, J. M. Colburn, and W. Lewis Brown.

BUSINESS MENTION.

During the coming week, Mrs. W. W. Robert will open a Musical Instrument and Music Depot in Barton & Hodgman's Block, where she will keep on hand pianos, organs, and other musical instruments and a large quantity of Sheet Music and Music Books.

The First National Bank is a ready going a good business. Its New York Correspondent is the First National Bank of that city, a banking institution whose solidity and standing may be gathered from the fact that its stock is quoted at $210 per share.

Mr. C. A. Rucker, is moving his stock to-day into his new store in Stanley, White & Sweet's Block. He has built in a handsome counter and complete shelving, and will have one of the finest stores in town.

Messrs. Gunther & Cappa are doing a lively Real Estate and Insurance business. They represent some of the best and most responsible companies in the country.

Messrs. Leonard & Co. have shipped from New York last week ten thousand dollars worth of clothing. As they cannot wear it all themselves, they will be quite willing to sell a few suits.

The Commissioners then personally examined the proposed line of the road, as prayed for by D. B. Mathews and others, from Colorado City to Bear Creek Cañon, and ordered that the same be located, provided that the petitioners pay to Longmeyer and Bott, the sum of $100 as damages for their land.

The Board then allowed the bills of Back East they can't believe that a grasshopper is able to swallow a Studebaker wagon. They forget that, being mounted on wheels, the wagon runs down it with very little effort.

MONUMENT CITY.

This town is situated fifty-five miles south of Denver, on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad. It was laid out last February by Henry Limback and Chas. Adams. Its present population is about 100. The town has three stores, a blacksmith shop, tin and shoe shops, hotel, telegraph and post office, a contractor and builder's office, by real estate and insurance office, a good school and three church organizations. Good pine timber and a saw mill only seven miles distant, and another to be erected near town. As good water as the Territory affords is had at a depth of from 15 to 28 feet.

Monument City is one of the most handsomely located towns in Colorado. The foot-hills, with their magnificent rocks and trees, their castles and rocky castles, some of whose summits reach from one hundred to one hundred and fifty feet high, lie to the west about two miles, with Monument Creek passing through the western limits of the town. Two and a half miles to the north is the Divide, from whose summit the waters flow on one side to the northward, and the other to the south. East of the town one and a half miles, is a beautiful pine grove extending along the Divide, which runs in a southeasterly direction, while to the south the fertile valleys of the Monument and Fountain Creeks stretch away to the Arkansas Valley, seventy-five miles south.

A large extent of country is tributary to Monument, and will doubtless make it quite an important business place ere long.

It is the intention of those owning the land embracing the town to appropriate a portion of the proceeds from the sale of lots to public improvements.—Agriculturist.

DEAF MUTE ASYLUM.

The Trustees of the Mute Asylum met at Colorado Springs on Wednesday last: present Dr. Buckingham, in the chair; and Messrs. Wolfe and France. After auditing and allowing accounts, and receiving various reports, the following resolution was passed and recorded:

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees feel great encouragement at the progress made by the pupils of the Institute since its organization, under the principalship of Professor Ralston, assisted by Mrs. Kennedy, and the management of Mr. Kennedy. We are satisfied that all the officers having immediate charge of the institution are discharging their various duties in a manner satisfactory to the Board, and for the best interest of the pupils under their care, and that the future prosperity of the Institution demands the re-engagement of the present incumbents.

The Board then adjourned until the first Wednesday in January.

COLORADO'S FUTURE.

"You may think me an enthusiast, but, in the years to come, looking back, from my present standpoint of my own time, instead of belonging to the public, I shall offer to wager you, expect to see greater advances in the future than the most sanguine amongst you have dared to dream of. Nine years ago, the present agricultural situation would have been scouted as a dream. But progress, which is older than Astræa, has poured the floods of thousands of acres of your land from the sterility of the Desert, as it was called on your national maps, and has demonstrated that the touch of water is so magical and fertilizing to the soil that it can make what seems a wilderness to blossom as the rose.

"The Platte River, running hundreds of miles through the almost rainless plains, stigmatized, as it has been as the most useless river of its length upon the continent, will, with the other rivers traversing your vast expanse, eventually become, under wise and comprehensive legislation, irrigating canals for millions of acres more. And, when you prairie wines, with all their unused power, are utilized, as they will be, by windmills of large size, constantly pumping water from farmers' irrigating streams, night and day, out from the bowels of the earth upon the soil of his garden and his farm—then, indeed, will that period arrive which Governor Evans in his last message foresaw and owes; when the pen will send to the mountain its precious gift of bread, and the mountain, will, in return, give to the nation its unstinted gift of silver and gold.

Nor will this be all. Upon these innumerable millions of acres, so fitted by nature for grazing—upon the plains and all through these mountains that fill half our territorial area—will be found millions upon millions of heads of stock with their contented and thriving owners realizing that their occupation is the easiest, pleasantest, and most profitable of all the industries by which men live and prosper.

Down, too, from these mountains, which for hundreds of miles are seamed with gold and silver, with lead and copper, forced into the molten rocks when the Creator spoke this world into existence, will pour the constant stream of wealth which will enrich this favored portion of the Republic.

The aggregation of manufacturing wealth, and your railroad lines will be extended in every direction, piercing the mountains and connecting with the regions far to the West, and South, as now with the East and West. Your numberless factories will send to the Eastern sterling matter that will be "gilt-edged" indeed. Your towns will see the throbbing pulse of growth and progress in their veins as their boundaries and their business enlarge. Your aggregate population instead of an hundred thousand, will be counted by the hundreds of millions. Your magnificent mountain scenery and invigorating atmosphere will attract tens of thousands from the Old World as well as from the new.

The city of scores of thousands of people have so long insisted the present century would find grown up under the shadow of these mountains, as the depot and entrepot for the vast business exchanges trade and commerce will surely require in this region, will surround your capitol then crowning yonder knoll. And the State of Colorado, the Queen State of the Continent, will emerge from Territorial dependence into the independence of a true State sovereignty; and, with its brilliant star on the banner of beauty and glory, its Senators and Representatives will stand at Washington with a self-reliant power and authority, that only Congressmen from a State can realize. May a kind Providence speed that welcome and auspicious day."—Speech of the Hon. Schuyler Colfax at the Denver Fair.

OUR MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENTS.

Although Colorado Springs is by no means a Pittsburgh or a Lowell, and doesn't even aspire to be, our manufacturing interests are already beginning to make a respectable showing, there being now about half a dozen establishments which may fairly claim to the title of Factories.

Foremost, of course, is the Planing Mill of the Pioneer Manufacturing Company, which has been in active operation for about a couple of years, and which is now turning out a large amount of work, including all kinds of sawing, planing, and moulding, and hand scroll work, furniture, and so forth. The mill is well furnished with machinery, and the character of the work done by it is first class.

Peck & Moore have their factory on the Fountain in good running order, and are turning out considerable work. They make a specialty of machine work and move making.

Messrs. Keeves and Price, recently from Chicago, have built a building 24x40 on the Fountain, and have gone into the Tannery business, having dug a capacious cistern from the creek to their premises. They are buying up a large quantity of hides and skins, which they will transform into leather. They will shortly add the tanning of buckskins, and the manufacture of buckskin suits, gloves, etc.

Jacobs and Collins (Iris, Mill) is running steadily, has plenty of grain, and is turning out a first-class quality of flour.

Wilson & Wood may rank as manufacturers, and send from their forge and tin shop, some exceedingly creditable specimens of work. Lately they have done considerable work here and at Manitou, in the shape of pumps, rams, and other hydraulic appliances, and have shown themselves fully up to this difficult branch of manufacture.

THE MINES OF COLORADO.

The general condition of the mines is good and daily improving. Grand Island District (Carbonate) is rapidly approaching the condition of a first-class camp, and, in point of production, ranks foremost in the Territory, being preceded only by Fairplay, Central, and Georgetown. It would seem as if this district was not to have any of those discouraging setbacks and barriers that almost universally mark the history of a new precious metal field. The reason is doubtless to be found in the extreme tractability of the ore, and the comparative ease with which the veins are worked. Good [illegible] and Sunshine continue to be the theatre of rich discoveries and enormous assays, beyond which, with the exception of what is come in Gold Spring, Gold Cloud, and a very few other mines, not little can be said. No district can grow wealthy and prosperous on specimen assays, and it is to be hoped that this one will shortly emerge from its youth, already too much prolonged, and begin to turn out ore by the ton. It possesses the basis for a rich and permanent district.

The great item of interest in connection with the Gilpin County mines is the excellent results obtained from the deep workings. This is especially noticeable on the Gregory, Briggs, Leavitt, and Burrough's lodes, from which large quantities of ore are being taken at depths varying from 400 to 800 feet below outcrop workings. In these mines, and in a number of others, instead of a scarcity of ore, the veins show larger bodies of mineral at the bottom of the shaft than at any previous date in their history, with no diminution in the grade, except in one or two cases, which may fairly be deemed as only temporary. The bulk of the yield is now coming from the mines of Central City, and Gregory Point, whereas a year ago Quartz Hill was yielding more than all the others. The reduced cost of milling has also stimulated the reopening of a number of medium grade mines, and a large portion of the month's yield has been surface ore. The output of smelting ore has, perhaps, increased a little, being from 12 to 15 tons per day, while the smelter returns show as well as during any previous month of this year.

The Georgetown mines were never in a more prosperous state than at present. In the Dives and Pelican, the veins of ore are simply immense, and entirely unprecedented in the history of silver mining in Colorado. Leaven[illegible] Bonanza and Brown Mountains are producing largely from a score of lodes, all of which give great encouragement as depth is attained. The ore bodies continues unabated, and will, sooner or later, force the citizens to establish a rail communication with the valley, or to induce the Colorado Central to extend their line up the gulch.

The Mt. Lincoln mines (especially the old and standard ones) are in good order, and are producing, daily, about $2,000 worth of ore; more than can be taken by the local works, consequently considerable is being sacked to other points. The ores do average, as a whole, about $100 per ton (certainly not more); but their tractability fully makes up for the mining in the grade.

As reports come in from the San Juan mines, they show with tolerable accuracy, that the district is to be one of the largest in Colorado, when it becomes the trial of youth, and is developed with intelligence and energy. As yet that greater excitement miserable "comforter"—the specimen assay—has the entire field, but it will not be long before ore will be coming out in quantity, and a reasonable judgment may be passed on the actual worth of the mines.

Movements of ore during the last month have been very active. The Golden Sunshine Working received more than at any previous date, and it has been coming from all parts of the country.

FALL MANAGEMENT OF SHEEP IN COLORADO.

Lambs may be weaned when between three and four months old. Ewes and the ewes get a better start if they are taken away while the grass is green.

In weaning, it is best to keep the lambs on the old range, and remove the ewes out of their hearing. The lambs are much more contented on the old range. It is well also to leave fifty or ewes among the lambs to keep them quiet. It requires a month to thoroughly wean them—then, if the flock is small, they may be put back with the ewes—but for the Winter it is not well to keep over one thousand sheep, of any age, in a flock; they will annoy and bay the action, a cost of herding in the increased amount of wool and fleece, and the satisfaction of seeing them in good heart.

Sheep herds should not be changed oftener than is absolutely necessary, as the sheep become accustomed to one man, and [illegible] much better than with a stranger. It is essential that the rams be kept away from the ewes until the rutting season, for this is a key to the success of the business to have lambs come in the Winter. Unless extraordinary care is given them, nine tenths of the lambs will die, and those saved will cost more than they are worth. Besides the ewes are ruined much more from having lambs in the Winter than in the Spring on green grass.

Too much care cannot be given to have good lambs and ewes in good condition at the beginning of Winter. If they enter the Winter in good condition, they will "pull their own" much better than if poor, for, with a few days, cold nights, storms, and dry grass, they will have quite enough to keep what they have without making more fat. If poor in the Fall, it will require the best of care and attention to get them through without loss, and they will constantly be a source of annoyance and loss, rather than pleasure and profit.

It is an excellent plan to give a fresh range to turn the sheep on in December, for the Winter, so the sheep will not be obliged to eat the grass they have been running over all the Fall. When it is convenient, to clear a few acres of timber, without underbrush, could be selected for Winter range, so that the sheep may be put out from cold winds and storms while feeding. The Winter corral should be on gravel sloping to east or south, and should be protected on the north and west by tight fences or by trees or sheds. At least two tons of hay for each one thousand sheep, should be stacked near the corral, for Winter storms. It will be worth your while to feed when need. Salt should be fed twice a week, unless it is kept before them constantly—it may be fed in small troughs or on clean, flat rocks.—Agriculturist.

CIVILIZATION AT THE FOOT OF PIKES PEAK.

Civilization is of an advanced type in this particular locality—a rather astonishing statement to make in the presence of the fact that it has only been settled for a few years, yet we state it in spite of the risk to our veracity. In history, beginning with the discovery of the Pueblo Indian Ruins, on the 15th of November, 1870, is far in advance of civilization. Not much the gold excitement of 1859, which brought hundreds from their firesides in the East, did it attain any special celebrity; and as the "ever" sub-side and fortunes were wrecked, and the gold hunters began their weary tramp homeward, the place was almost forgotten, and has certainly been neglected. Other more inviting fields were occupied by the paroxysmal victims of avarice. But out of the failure to discover gold in paying quantities, a compensating result has occurred, which is only to be mentioned to be appreciated. An success followed the self sacrificing gold seeker, a mining town would have sprung up in a few weeks, and this beautiful, green-embowered valley would have been given to a horde of greedy, cold-hearted human beings, from whose grasp no legislative power could have wrested it. But such was not the case. Instead, there nestles here, almost under the brow of the Peak itself, a town "beautiful for situation," of no mean proportions, rapidly growing in population, business character, and social influence, whose inhabitants are mostly from the States, and giving promise in its very infancy, of a great and important future.

When the idea of colonizing the Territory by people from other States was first suggested, it met the common fate of ridicule; but the shrewd business men who had studied the problem persevered in their endeavor, and they can ask no greater or more enduring monument to their industry than the numerous thriving towns which adorn this outstretching landscape, or take refuge beneath the awful forms of these everlasting hills. Any other plan, enforced by stronger inducements than the original colony presented, would probably have failed. As it is, Colorado is little else than a mammoth colony, and as such, is unlike any territory in the Union. Remembering, too, that society has passed from the constructive or experimental stage, the quiet reader can anticipate the kind of people he would find here. There are no Indians hovering over the solitary family with threatening malice, or making short work of their cries in slaughter; there are no rough, wild Westerners, cut-throats and knaves, characters which figure in books written by such men as Mark Twain. There is as gentle, as well educated, as religious, as well dressed, as orderly a population here as there is in any town east of the Mississippi.—Rev. J. H. Hendenhall, in Medina Gazette.

In the government of Pescau, in Russia, a letter was circulated, which reported that the government intended to send 5,000 of the prettiest girls of the country to Africa to be married to negroes. There was panic, and the girls made haste to marry any one who would have them, and there were any number of marriages. One brandy dealer made a small fortune out of it, for at Russian weddings they must have brandy. Now the authorities have discovered that this merchant started the story, and they are not yet done with him.

ROUND ABOUT THE TERRITORY.

The Fairplay Sentinel reports a busy and profitable season among the miners on Mount Lincoln.

One of Hayden's scientists thinks San Luis Park represents the finest scenery to be found in the Rocky Mountains.

A party of prospectors, who left Sherman recently for a trip to the North Park, have returned with fine specimens of gulch gold, and report finding diggings that will pay working.

A worksho, 350 feet long, and to be built of stone, is to be added to the penitentiary at Canon City. The plans of the building have been submitted to the Board of Penitentiary Commissioners.

The first meeting of the Duelo Club Association will take place on the 28th, 29th, and 30th days of this month.

Gangs of sheep-stealers still prowl around in one or two counties of Southern Colorado. Sheep are killed or maimed every night or two. Several sheep-raisers have received warnings in horrible fashion to quit the county for remain at the peril of their lives.

Rents are going down in Denver.

About one year ago the town of Fairplay was almost destroyed by fire. Since that time $59,000 worth of new buildings have been erected.

One farmer at Greeley has 1,000 bushels of potatoes.

There is another stir for the immediate extension of the Colorado Central Railroad from Longmont to Greeley. The distance is twenty-eight miles.

The San Juan Prospector says: "Just as we predicted, the war with the Indians in San Juan has turned out to be a big scare. It is one of those heartless tricks which men seek to cover themselves and injure other people, under the cloak of innocence, and should themselves with the cry that the Indians are guilty."

At Fort Collins, the operator of the new telegraph company is of the feminine gender—a Mrs. Macmasters—of whom the Fort Collins Standard feels constrained to remark: "Mrs. M. is an experienced operator and teacher of the art of telegraphy, and will soon begin to give lessons to all those who desire to learn the mysterious art. Besides her knowledge of telegraphy, Mrs. Macmasters has a thorough knowledge of nothing else, and has entire charge of a large establishment.

The Trinidad Chronicle says: "Information reaches us that track-laying will commence at Pueblo on the Rio Grande Railway (narrow gauge), on the first of the coming month. They will lay this Winter, for miles of track in this direction, the grading having been previously done. When this is done they will be within forty miles of us, at the Cuchiaras. We understand times are twenty miles at that point already, and quite a number of new houses are in course of erection. An order of 17,000 feet of lumber left one of our mills for there last week. At the point where the narrow gauge crosses the Cuchiaras is a good nearly level locality for a town, and we not doubt it will be rapidly built up. We wish the D. & R. G. R. R. good speed in their work.

One Jack Reynolds, a notorious character, met a sudden and tragic fate at Alma, Park County, last Monday. He was attempting a number of, it seems, with a gang of robbers, which he resisted, in the hunting in people's places. To vary his diversions, he set fire to the calaboose. This all happened on Sunday. Monday morning, about two o'clock, a crowd of masked men took Reynolds from the jail and hung him to a limb until he was just enough alive to promise to leave town. He left immediately.

The contest between Evans and Greeley is over, the latter having been officially declared to be the County-Seat of Weld County.

The San Juan miners generally are leaving the mountains and preparing for the coming Winter.

The Greeley Tribune says: "Orr came to Greeley four years ago with only seventy-five cents in money, and a Colony certificate worth one hundred and fifty dollars. He now has a good farm, a dozen agricultural machinery, teams, etc., and this year he raised 1,100 bushels of wheat. There are plenty more like him in our valley.

Saguache County now boasts its newspaper, the first number of the Saguache Chronicle having just been published. It is well filled with information about that section of Colorado, and will be a powerful agency in instrumental in attracting population and capital thither.

The Golden papers mention have more orders for paper than they can see place with.

Box elders make a growth of eight feet in a season in some parts of the Territory.

An Eastern paper announces that the first box of tooth-powder has just reached Denver. There always were wise men in the East.

The Pueblo barbers have returned to their old rates, and it now costs a Pueblo dude 25 cents to get shaved, and half a dollar to get his hair cut.

Pueblo is to have a grand demonstration, including a parade of firemen, on the occasion of the test of the Pueblo waterworks.

Work is being pushed on the Pueblo and Salt Lake Railroad, and the County Commissioners have authorized the issue of $350,000 in County bonds in aid of the enterprise.

One of Denver's first citizens is advertising in a Boston paper to send choice specimens of Pike's Peak gold nuggets for fifty cents—and prepaid.

The Golden Globe is responsible for the following:—"The latest yarn is from down the creek. A school teacher in one of the districts went to one of the trustees and asked his advice. He loved a girl, and the girl loved him, but they were satisfied in their own minds that the match would be strenuously opposed by the folks. What should he do? The old gentleman told him to take the girl some dark night, go to Golden and get married, and in the morning tell the old folks the state of the case, and crave pardon. The next morning the school teacher and the adviser's daughter appeared before the old gentleman and craved. The latter followed his advice.

Secretary Pendins informs county officers that, though the law provides that the Territorial Statutes shall be furnished to them at the cost of the Territory, the legislature failed to provide the means for printing a sufficient number to supply the demand. But county officers have the privilege of paying for them themselves—in paper binding at [illegible] and law binding at [illegible] per volume. Hence forth, let nobody grumble.

Reports from the northern part of the Territory state that the weather is hatching out the young grasshoppers in a lively manner, and there is reason to hope that, if it continues, the whole crop will be killed, unless time for the early frosts.

A NEW AND THOROUGHLY FITTED

Sanitarium

Is now completed and ready for the accommodation of invalids and others who desire to use the waters of the celebrated

HOT SPRINGS AT CANON CITY.

Prof. Loew, of the Wheeler Expedition, has pronounced the Hot and Cold Springs "the best mineral waters of the West, which he has analyzed," and he compares them to the celebrated springs of Vichy and Marienbad, in Europe.

In mineral constituents and in the temperature of the water, the "Hot Spring" is very similar to Vichy, "by far the first establishment in Europe, and the greatest thermal establishment in France, over-crowded every season." The temperature of the water in the spring is 98 to 102, and when drawn it to the tubs runs from 94 to 98.

These springs are now directly accessible by the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, which is completed to Canon City. Sufficient hotel accommodations for visitors are provided in the town, and a large and elegant has been erected, and will be opened in a few weeks. There are two Livery Establishments, with a good supply of horses and carriages for riding and driving.

Canon City lies directly at the mouth of the WORDS OF WISDOM.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE.—To do right principles and live on low ones is Christian inconsistency. We are a more or less inconsistent. There is no man whose practice is no worse than his profession, no one who does not live below his standard. But absolute inconsistency is when a man's life, taken as a whole, is in opposition to his acknowledged views and principles. If a man says it is more blessed to give than to receive, and is ever receiving scarce ever giving, he is inconsistent. The process that to please God is the only thing worth living for, not his wants, and aims, and contrivances are most to please men, he is wise for the generation of the children of the world; for the generation of the children of light he is not wise. — F. W. Robertson.

SELF-RESPECTING BEHAVIOR. There is anything in which the beauty and the wisdom of knowing when to leave off is manifester, it is in behavior, and how rare is beautiful behavior, greatly by reason of the want of due proportion in the characters and objects of most persons, and from their want of some perception of the whole of things! Let any man run over in his mind the circle of his friends and acquaintances, and of those he has become acquainted with in history and biography; and he will own how few are or have been persons of beautiful behavior, of real greatness of mind. Observe, the calmness of great men, noting, by the way that real greatness belongs to no station and no set of circumstances. This calmness is the cause of their beautiful behavior. Vanity, injustice, intemperance, are insanities arising from a blindness to proportion in the vain, the unjust, the intemperate. Whereas no one thing, unless it be the love of God, has such a continuous force on a great mind as to seem in a to it. Arthur Helps.

EARNESTNESS.—Without earnestness there is nothing to be done in life; yet among the people whom we name cultivated men little earnestness is to be found; in labors and employments, in arts, nay, even in recreations, they proceed, I may say so, with a sort of languid decorousness; they live as they read a page of newspapers, only to have done with it; they remind one of that young Englishman at Rome, who said, with a contented air, one evening, in some company, that to say he had dispatched six churches and two galleries. They wish to show an acquaintance with a multitude of things, and precisely those they have the least concern with; and they never see that hunger is not satisfied by snapping at the air. When I become acquainted with a man, my first inquiry is, With what does he employ himself and how, and with what degree of perseverance? The answer regulates the interest that I take in him for life. — Goethe.

THE BROKEN BUCKLE. This is related of a hero in Scottish history, that, when an overwhelming force was in full pursuit, and all his followers were urging him to more rapid flight, he coolly dismounted, in order to repair a flaw in his horse's harness. Whistling with the broken buckle, the distant clouds swept down in nearer thunder, but as the advancing foes saw the eager spears were ready to cast down on him, the flaw was mended, the clasp was fastened, the steed was mounted, and, like a sweeping falcon, he vanished from their view. The broken buckle would have left him in the field an inglorious prisoner; the timely delay sent him in safety to his anxiously waiting comrades. There is in many the same careless precipitancy, and the same profitable delay. The man who, from his prayerless wasting, bounces off into the business of the day, however good his talents and great his diligence, is only galloping on a steed harnessed with a broken buckle, and must not be astonished if, in his hottest haste, he is most hazardously leaving perishing in the rust. — Dr. James Hamilton.

SERMONS.—There are two ways of regarding a sermon—either as a human composition or a divine message. If we look upon it entirely as the first, and require our clergyman to finish it with the utmost care and learning for our better delight, whether of ear or intellect, we shall be necessarily led to expect much formality and stateliness in its delivery, and think all is not well if the points have not a goodly fringe around them, and a good cushion in front of them; but we shall at the same time consider the treatise thus prepared as something to which it is our duty to listen without restlessness, or half an hour or three-quarters, but which, when that duty has been decorously performed, we may dismiss from our minds in happy confidence of being provided with another when next it shall be necessary. But, if once we begin to regard the preacher, whatever his faults, as a man sent with a message to us, which it is a matter of life or death whether we hear or refuse, if we look upon him as sent in charge over many spirits in danger of ruin, and having a power to him but an hour or two in the seven days to speak to them; if we make some endeavors to conceive how precious those hours ought to be to him, a small advantage on the side of God, after his flocks have been exposed for six days together to the world's temptations and he has been forced to watch the thorn and the thistle springing up in their hearts, and to see what wheat had scattered there, snatched from the wayside by the wicked one and the fowls; and at last, when breathless and weary with the week's labor, they give him this interval of imperfect and anxious hearing, he has but thirty minutes to get at the separate hearts of a thousand men to convince them of all their weakness, shame them for all their sins, warn them of all their dangers, to try by this way and that to strike the hard fastenings of those doors where the Master himself has stood and knocked, yet none opened, thirty minutes to raise the dead in, let us but once understand and see this, and we shall look with changed eyes upon the drapery of gay furniture about the place from which the message of judgment must be delivered, which either breathes upon the dry bones that they may live, or, if ineffectual, remains recorded in condemnation, perhaps against the utterer and listener alike, but assuredly against one of them. — Ruskin.

SUPERIOR PEOPLE.

One word more to the teachers waiting for scholars before they and their multitudinous swarms disappear from view for another six months—don't inflict too many great men on the next generation. There is not a boy or girl who shoulders his school bag this week who has not been adjured from his cradle to become a president, a missionary, or a millionaire, "a great and good man" of some sort or other. As soon as he could walk, mother and father were on the watch to discover peculiar talent in him. From the day he enters school until he leaves it, the prizes and honors are the objects at which they aim for him. That he should jog on with the hard-working rank and file of the boys, who master just enough knowledge to enable them to jog on afterward with the rank and file outside, honest mechanics, tradesmen, professional men, agreeable fellows and good workers who earn their bread and butter and make no mark in the world—what father or mother imagines such a fate possible for their prodigy? Yet in nine hundred and ninety nine cases out of the thousand he goes so jogging on, in school and in the world, and years the gall and bitterness of disappointment that he could not reach the unattainable mark they set before him.

It is not only the school-boy who shares in this grasping for greatness; the American of any age scorns mediocrity. He must be in the place to which he rightfully belongs. He is in trade he must be a Stewart, he is in politics a Sumner or a Seward, or a Greeley, or a Cooper; but what if he is in reality a ward politician or a city grocery keeper? but why shall he not have immortal longings in him and be over-worked and miserable and disagreeable in consequence, as the rest of the aspiring Smiths and Jones who are his neighbors? His wife and children train and work and fret and scold for the cordon bleu of whatever sort it may be which sewers their fancy; their dress and talk and actual live after the fashion of some village aristocrat who is their demi-god, but whose habits they

THE PARIS DIAMOND MARKET.

A curious account is given by the Ordre, of the place where the dealers in precious stones assemble in Paris to transact business, namely, at the Cafe des Varieties, Boulevard Montmartre. The following is an extract from the last part of the article: "As soon as the various gentlemen are assembled and have taken out their stones, 'Here,' cries one, 'is a real bargain, one of the finest ancient pieces of jewelry known. It is a necklace which belonged to the Princess Clemmence, the setting and diamonds being all of the finest. Proiseto of Prussia paid 75,000 francs for it twenty years ago.' The article passed from hand to hand, and each person examines it attentively with his magnifying glass. Some countenances express doubt and indecision, and the necklace at last reaches Nicole, who is the great authority. He weighs it in his hand and inspects it indifferently, and then says: 'The two stones at each end are ancient, and got with their setting belonged to the Countess de Trogean; two others, which are still finer, formed part of a collection stolen at Venice, in 180., from Mme. Morosini; the necklace afterwards belonged to Lady Temple, whose husband bought it at Canabiar of Isaac Lieven, your grandfather, Monsieur; she left it to her daughter, Mme. De X——, who sold it three days after her marriage; as for the sapphire in the middle, it came from Mme. Schneider's sale; as for the rest, are new diamonds and settings, and came direct from Amsterdam; however, it is well made, and the 75,000 francs demanded seems to be a fair price.' The affair is settled. However extraordinary the above may appear, there are in the world five or six individuals who know at the diamonds of value and all the articles of jewelry of importance that exist, and who can recognize them thirty years after if they have only seen them for one minute."

Archie Campbell, a city officer in Edinburgh, of notorious celebrity, had the misfortune to lose his mother; and, in order to gratify her last wish, he had her body conveyed to the Highlands in a hearse, for interment. He returned, it is rumored, with the hearse full of smuggled whisky. A friend, one day, began to tease him on the subject. "Wow, mon," replied Archie, "there's nae harm done. I only carried awa' the body, and thought nae the speerit."
